

Influences, impacts and interventions

Exploring issues around young people's experiences of family and domestic violence

Keynote speakers: Professor Kate Fitz-Gibbon and Matt Tyler

Join leading experts and practitioners for an online conference exploring a range of issues relating to young people's experiences of family and domestic violence

The keynote will be followed by a choice of panel discussions, giving attendees insights into current research, emerging challenges, and evidence-informed approaches to this very complex practice area.

Why attend?

- Hear from leading experts at the forefront of research, policy and practice
- Choose from a range of panel discussions – including young people and relationship violence, adolescent violence, and young people as victim survivors of FV
- Learn strategies to deal with the impact of the 'manosphere'
- Explore emerging challenges and trends impacting young people's safety and wellbeing
- Learn about evidence-informed responses, interventions and support strategies

Who should attend?

Professionals, health and community service providers, educators, organisations and practitioners working with young people who wish to deepen their understanding of issues around young people and family violence.
